It is with great pleasure that the CA Global Group extends our annual newsletter to you.

We start with taking a closer look at how "millennials" are changing the workplace culture, not just in Africa but globally! Remember how the mining sector took a hit two years ago? We share how the sector has improved since then and how our recruitment in this sector has thrived.

Our relationships with various development banks in Africa has grown over the past year - we highlight the role of development banks for growth in Africa.

We have also leveraged our online influence by utilising various Google tools (search engine optimisation, webmaster tools, keyword research, etc.) to continuously improve our reach across Africa! What's the "next big sector"? We think the future colour of gold is green, as agriculture in Africa starts picking up everyone wants a piece of that pie!

Please feel free to forward this newsletter on to anyone who may find it interesting, visit our website www.caglobalint.com for more information on our services; any comments can be directed to info@caglobalint.com.
2 years ago, the African mining market took a big hit. China, the top mining nation in the world and economic superpower, essentially turned off the tap of access and shut down many of their mines.

Here at CA Global, we felt this hit, as mining jobs became fewer and fewer. But all was not lost. For the past 2 years, the mining sector in Africa has been slowly reclaiming its former glory.

If you haven't already realised it, it's the Age of the Millennial. Those born between 1980 and 2000 are now of working age, and entering the workforce in droves, changing the operation of the workplace as they go. But what makes the millennial so special?

CA Global Headhunters has noticed an incredible increase in the number of clients with interests in agriculture boosting their staff requirements for projects in various countries across Africa. Agriculture Jobs in Africa have risen quite significantly. The interesting thing to note is that the investment is not only coming from within Africa but also from companies outside of Africa. Everyone in the know is looking to tap into the Agri-sector.
In today’s technological age, it is important to harness the opportunities the internet brings. Social media is an increasingly growing market, one that can greatly support a business. How can decoding social media data via Google Analytics help boost workplace functionality?

The main gap that a country is usually faced with is insufficient finance for economic transformation. What makes a Development Bank different from other banks?
